Based on our online research conducted, Hello Halo does not appear to have an official standalone website. Searches for the brand primarily lead to third-party platforms such as Foodpanda, local business directories, and social-media-related results. The brand maintains an online presence through these platforms and appears to use social media and messaging for customer engagement and orders. Despite having multiple branches across Visayas, no independently operated official website under the Hello Halo brand was identified. Searching for “Hello-Halo Iloilo Official Website” and related variations primarily returns third-party platforms such as Foodpanda, Reddit, and local directories not a Hello-Halo-owned domain.

Short Explanation Questions:

1. We chose Hello-Halo because it is a well-known local dessert in Iloilo City. Despite its growing presence and popularity among customers, the business does not appear to have an official standalone website, with much of its online presence relying on social media and third-party platforms. This makes Hello-Halo a good business to focus on because creating a dedicated website could help strengthen its online presence, provide customers with accessible information about its products and branches, and make it easier for potential customers to discover the brand. We also chose Hello-Halo because it represents a local business that has successfully grown within the community, making it a relevant and practical example for developing a website that supports a local brand.
2. The target audience of this website is primarily its customers in Iloilo, especially students, young adults, families, and dessert lovers who are looking for affordable and refreshing Filipino desserts. The website also targets new and potential customers who want to try and discover Hello-Halo, view its menu, check branch locations, and learn more about the brand. Additionally, the website can cater to tourists and visitors in Iloilo who are interested in trying local food and supporting local businesses.

3. The design choices we made were based on a halo-halo theme, using cream-white and purple as the main color scheme to represent the dessert. We chose these colors because they give the website a soft, clean, and refreshing appearance while still connecting to the theme. We also used simple and organized layouts to make the website easy to navigate and visually appealing. The overall design aims to create a fun and welcoming atmosphere that reflects the colorful and enjoyable experience of eating halo-halo.
4. The website can solve the problem of scattered online information about Halo-Halo. Customers may have to search through different social media pages or third-party platforms to find the menu, branch locations, operating hours, and other information. A dedicated website would put all of this information in one accessible and organized platform. It can also help by strengthening its online presence and brand identity. Since the business has multiple branches, the website can provide a centralized place where customers can discover the brand, view its products, locate nearby branches, and learn more about the business. This can also help attract new customers and tourists who are searching online for local dessert shops.
5. The Home Page is the part of the website we are most proud of because it is the section we spent the most time working on. We focused on making it visually appealing while making sure it clearly represents the Hello-Halo brand and its products. We carefully considered the layout, colors, images, and overall theme to create a welcoming first impression for all viewers of the website. Since the Home Page is the first thing users see when they visit the website, we wanted it to be both attractive and easy to understand. The amount of time and effort we put into improving its design makes it the part of the website we are most proud of.

6. The part we found the most difficult was finding suitable pictures to use for the website. Most of the photos posted by Hello-Halo were AI-generated, which made it challenging to find authentic and high-quality images that represented their actual products and brand. We had to be careful when choosing images to make sure they were appropriate for the website and matched the overall design and theme. This took more time because we wanted the website to look visually appealing while still presenting the business in a realistic and reliable way.
